Turning of the tassels: SPRING AND SUMMER SHIDLER GRADUATIONS
Aloha,

Welcome to the Fall 2010 issue of Shidler Business. This is a great issue packed with fun articles and profiles that share all the amazing things that our students, faculty, alumni and friends have accomplished in recent months.

In our feature stories, the excitement of our spring and summer graduations is brought to life in photographs and highlights from our commencement ceremonies throughout Asia and the Pacific. You will also get to know Will Weinstein, one of our most popular summer guest lecturers. We will explore why students and community leaders alike make it a priority to reserve seats in Will’s classes and lectures on ethics.

Finally, we will shadow some outstanding Shidler students as they recount their exciting international internship experiences. Through their stories we will discover how their hard work, initiative and networking efforts helped to create unforgettable experiences which have a lasting impact on their careers.

We continue to invest heavily in people and programs with the establishment of several new scholarship and program endowments in the 2009–2010 fiscal year. These gifts, as well as our many other individual and corporate donors, are recognized in our “Honor Roll” listing on page 23.

I would like to send a special thanks to the members of the Shidler Alumni Association who have truly amped up the fun factor at our events. A record number of alumni of all ages and professions are connecting through our social mixers, sake tasting fundraisers, and student welcome events. All of our outreach efforts would not be possible without the help of our hardworking and dedicate alumni board members. It is truly an incredible time to be a Shidler alum.

In the following pages, we hope that you will enjoy reading about all that we have achieved together. Thank you for your support of the Shidler College of Business and please do not hesitate to give us your feedback and comments.

Sincerely,

V. Vance Roley

It’s the most celebrated time of a student’s life—graduation.
No one looks forward to this time more than undergraduate students. Close to 200 undergraduate students joined 1,400 other bachelor candidates at the University’s Commencement Ceremonies at the Stan Sheriff Center on May 15. The commencement address was given by education specialist at the East-West Center, Dr. Maya Soetoro-Ng, better known as the sister of President Barack Obama. In her address, Soetoro-Ng challenged graduates to “shine a little light on more of the world’s shadows and improve [their] communities.”

Graduate students in Hawai’i celebrated the completion of their final semester with family and friends during a special Commencement Reception on May 14 in the Shidler courtyard. Among those in attendance were students from the Full-Time MBA, Part-Time MBA, Japan-Focused MBA, Master of Financial Engineering, and Master of Accounting programs. The following day, Shidler graduate students joined some 800 UH Mānoa graduate students at the Stan Sheriff Center and were treated to a second appearance by Dr. Soetoro-Ng.

Graduation ceremonies and celebrations continued throughout the spring and summer. On April 21, students of the Japan-Focused MBA class received their diplomas at a commencement ceremony held in Tokyo, Japan. The ceremony coincided with the end of a three-month capstone internship with companies in Japan.

In front of family and friends, 26 students from the first graduating class of the Master of Financial Engineering program were awarded diplomas at a private commencement ceremony held at the Kahala Hotel in July.

Vietnam Executive MBA (VEMBA) graduates also proudly accepted their diplomas this summer in Vietnam. On July 10, 40 students from the fifth VEMBA class in Hanoi participated in an elaborate ceremony on the beautiful grounds of the Hanoi School of Business. Forty-five students of the second VEMBA class in Ho Chi Minh City graduated on July 11 at a ceremony held at the White Palace Convention Center.

Congratulations and best wishes to all of the 2010 spring and summer graduates and welcome to the Shidler Alumni ‘Ohana.

ETHICS AND INTEGRITY IN THE REAL WORLD
THE WILL WEINSTEIN CONVERSATION SERIES by Amy Watari

Top students vie for seats in his class. Community leaders flock to his public lectures. His network includes the likes of renowned business tycoon Sam Zell and the “quiet philanthropist” Bernard Osher. Will Weinstein is UH Mānoa’s “rock star” professor whose mission is to help his students explore the multifaceted world of ethics.

It has been seven years since entrepreneur and financier Will Weinstein first began teaching his graduate summer courses at the Shidler College of Business and the William S. Richardson School of Law. Weinstein’s classes, “Ethics and Integrity in the Real World,” have built a reputation as “the” course to take among business and law students alike. Weinstein’s unique teaching style, open demeanor, and real-world curriculum are just a part of what contributes to his popularity. However, what students value are the interactive class discussions that revolve around real-world ethical dilemmas that occur every day.

Reece Tokunaga was among the students who truly felt that they gained a new perspective on ethics after completing Weinstein’s course. “I learned how to think ethically!” exclaimed Tokunaga. “He would always call on people to present their thoughts on ethical issues. It was very challenging for me because I always felt torn between the two sides of the issue; however, I really learned a lot from the unique experiences he provided us.”

“I enjoyed our discussions and I found the class to be extremely practical,” commented MBA student Tina Radan. “Now I look at things in a new way. I try to anticipate when an ethical dilemma will occur instead of thinking about what I would do if a situation occurred.”

Also adding to the synergistic class environment is an impressive line-up of guest speakers who participate in Weinstein’s public lecture series. Featuring top professionals from business, medicine, law, athletics, non-profit, etc., the lectures explore the ethical situations that occur in each industry and the role that ethics plays in daily decision-making.

Past speakers have included local and national leaders such as former Bank of Hawaii CEO Al Landon, commercial real-estate entrepreneur Jay Shidler, philanthropist Bernard Osher, UH Women’s Volleyball Coach Dave Shoji, real-estate and media tycoon Sam Zell, famed trial lawyer John Keker, Chairman of Senator John McCain’s National Education Policy Committee F. Philip Handy and Mary Bitterman, president of The Bernard Osher Foundation, to name just a few.

One of the highlights of this year’s Conversation Series for student Clifton Takenaka was the lecture on “Ethics in College Athletics.” Takenaka commented, “It was really interesting to hear these top sports administrators and coaches discuss the ethical challenges that occur in their industry. It was a real eye-opener.” The panel featured Jim
What sparked your interest in teaching ethics?

I always liked to teach. I taught in graduate school and loved the experience. When things got really bad in the business environment with Enron, etc., I decided that I wanted to do something that would make a difference. By teaching perhaps I could reach people at a critical time and help them figure out how to make good choices. What kinds of tools to use. What kinds of philosophies might be relevant. So when they are faced with ethical choices they have a “tool kit” to call upon.

What makes your class so popular with students?

My class is about processes. It’s not about answers. I help students get from point A to point B but they must learn to recognize when there is an ethical dilemma. We spend a lot of time talking about truth and deception. My class is about everyday life. When you allow yourself to stop and think, “What happened today?” That’s when you realize there is a lot of ethical stuff going on.

Tell us more about your Conversation Series.

Bringing these extraordinary people to UH is fun for me and it is fun for the speakers. But the real reason we do these lectures is because it shows that ethics is everywhere - in athletics, business, medicine, law – that’s why it’s so interesting. It’s also important for these speakers to visit UH because it leaves a lasting impression on them. Like Scott Peppet from the University of Colorado - Boulder. He’s a legal ethics genius. After his visit, maybe he’ll consider teaching here one day. It’s nice for Bernard Osher to see where some of his money is going. And Mary Bitterman is just extraordinary. People are just empowered by her. I’m empowered by her. I’ve enjoyed all of our speakers. In a way, I feel that by opening these lectures to the public, we’re making a small contribution to the community.

Donovan, UH Mānoa athletics director; Nick Rolovich, UH Mānoa football offensive coordinator; George Rush, head football coach for San Francisco City College; and Dick Tomey, former head football coach for San Jose State University.

It is evident that the time spent under Weinstein’s tutelage has undoubtedly left a lasting impact on his students, their thought process and their views on ethics. This is what fuels Weinstein’s passion for teaching and his commitment to his lecture series.

“That’s what it’s all about. I want people to stop and think about things that they normally wouldn’t think about,” said Weinstein. “I like to draw attention to ethical dilemmas that allow people to see the world differently. That’s what I enjoy.”

Initiative, hard work, focus and determination - These are just a few of the words used to describe the outstanding Shidler students who choose to maximize their education by participating in internships.

Below, we will meet some of Shidler’s top interns as they recount their exciting national and international experiences. These individuals truly embody the Shidler spirit. By taking initiative in their education, rising up to meet real-world challenges and utilizing their networks, these students have built solid professional reputations which have opened doors to new opportunities of a life-time.

Japan-focused MBA student Nirupama Raman wanted to make the most of her three-month internship in Tokyo, Japan. Through her initiative and hard work, this passionate intern discovered a new understanding and respect for the investment management industry which resulted in a life-changing opportunity.

“My internship was with Blackrock Solutions, a group that manages a proprietary investment and risk management package of applications,” explained Nirupama. “I was completely new to this industry, and I wanted to gain an insider’s view of what went on from top to bottom,” said Nirupama. “My boss encouraged me to attend all the meetings and information sessions and talk to people in different departments so I could gain an understanding of what the business was about. This brought me closer to realizing what I wanted to do and what kind of job I was interested in,” she continued.

Within the first month, Nirupama knew she wanted to work for Blackrock. “I loved the culture. I asked myself, ‘What do I have to do to prove that I really want to be here and get a job?’ So I worked extra hard and took the initiative to get as much out of my internship as I could,” said Nirupama. “I had really long hours, but it paid off in the end.”

As a first-time visitor to Japan, Nirupama also made fond memories of the culture and language that surrounded her. “Experiencing Japan first-hand was exciting - the karaoke, the food, the temples and I was glad to have my classmates with me to share it all.” She added, “Another plus was that I strengthened my bilingual communications skills. Meetings and phone conversations were in Japanese. My course work in Hawai‘i prepared me to handle business situations professionally.”

Upon completing her internship and graduating as one of the top of her class, Nirupama received a job offer from Blackrock. In August, she relocated to Sydney, Australia where she has been working non-stop to master her responsibilities as one of the company’s newest relationship managers.

KAINOA JONES and DEVIN UYEDA

Boeing, Seattle, Washington

For undergraduates Kainoa Jones and Devin Uyeda, nothing has been more life changing than landing a coveted internship position at Boeing’s corporate offices in Seattle, Washington.

“This summer was amazing,” exclaimed Kainoa, who interned in the Commercial Aviation Services division, where he developed a dashboard that provided financial information to support corporate decision-making. “Presenting my work to Boeing leadership was the highlight of my summer. To have managers find value in my product was validating and the excitement surrounding my dashboard was tremendously rewarding” said Kainoa. “After my initial presentation, I was asked to present several more times because it was so well received.”

For Devin, interning in the 737 Program as an estimating and pricing specialist was also gratifying. “My job focused around translating proposed engineering changes into dollar amounts, which was used to evaluate the viability of the change,” explained Devin. “My internship showed me what life after college would be like—5:30 a.m. mornings, tight deadlines, and meetings. The best memories were experiences such as renting my first apartment, lunches at Red Robin with coworkers, my first Mariner’s game, and time spent with other Hawai’i interns.”

After completing their twelve-week internships, Devin and Kainoa secured jobs at Boeing as estimating and pricing specialists thanks to their outstanding work and high recommendations. Both will graduate in December with bachelor’s degrees in finance and international business and look forward to relocating to Seattle in early 2011.

For those who want a worthwhile internship experience, Shidler alumnus and former Boeing intern Chris Erice (BBA ’09) suggests, “Start early! Look for internship opportunities during your first semester. As an intern, you have a better chance of landing a full-time job. The work that you do reflects on your evaluation. Build your professional network and let them know your goals so they will think of you when a job opens.” Chris currently serves as a systems and data analyst in the Boeing Information Technology (IT) division.

CHRIS STANLEY

Development Bank of American Samoa, Pago Pago, American Samoa

Chris Stanley spent his summer surrounded by the blue waters and sandy beaches of American Samoa, but it wasn’t all fun and games for this Full-Time MBA student. For ten weeks, Chris made the most of his internship at the Development Bank of American Samoa (DBAS).

“I was partnered with another MBA student, Justin Hijeck from Seton Hall University. Our task was to collect data, analyze the situation, and craft a five-year strategic plan for the bank,” explained Chris.

“With last year’s tsunami and the anticipated closing of the tuna canning industry, DBAS executives wanted to review their strategic direction. This is where we came in,” said Chris. “The Bank facilitated a grant for us [through the U.S. Department of the Interior and the UH Center for International Business Education and Research], believing that a fresh set of eyes could provide unbiased insight into their situation.”

After weeks of studying Samoan business culture, gathering data, interviewing stakeholders, and analyzing their findings, Chris and Hijeck presented their plan to the bank’s top executive. “Their presentation impressed the DBAS management team,” commented Shidler MBA alumnus and Seton Hall assistant professor of management Michael Valdez. “They did an outstanding job and I think their exceptional performance will open doors for future internship opportunities at DBAS.” Valdez served as faculty advisor for the project.

Of his internship experience, Chris remarked, “This project helped me to adapt and thrive in a different business climate. I had to learn quickly from the ground up and be able to offer solutions to the problems I found. Also, it was really neat to see a corner of the world that not a lot of people get to see.”

Of the public schools, Shidler was listed 9th among other top 25 schools such as the University of Pennsylvania, University of Michigan, UC Berkeley, USC and Georgetown University. The College also earned a spot on U.S. News’ overall ranking of “Best Undergraduate Business Programs.”

“We are extremely pleased to be listed among the nation’s best undergraduate business programs,” said V. Preparing students with these skills is our top priority.”

No ifs, ands, or buts.” Along with entertaining stories about his experiences as a young business professional, Lim also reminded students that, “The most important thing is to have fun. If you love what you do, then you will have passion and you will have proprietorship. If you enjoy your work, then you will have great results and great success.”

The event, held at the Hilton Hawaiian Village Beach Resort and Spa, created a special opportunity for students to be paired with mentors from Hawaii’s business community for an evening of conversation, networking and learning.

Mahalo to First Insurance Company of Hawaii for sponsoring Business Night for the fifth consecutive year and congratulations to the 25 outstanding business students who were recognized for their stellar accomplishments and the sponsoring companies that provided cash awards.

Beta Alpha Psi receives national award

The Delta Theta Chapter of Beta Alpha Psi from the Shidler College was presented with the KPMG Gold Chapter Award at the Beta Alpha Psi National Conference held in San Jose from August 5 to August 7. The Chapter was one of 15 to receive the coveted distinction, accompanied by an award of $2,500.

“This is a big accomplishment,” said Delta Theta President Raymond Koo. “We are one of the top 15 chapters in the nation! This would not have been possible without everyone’s efforts in tutoring students, participating in community service, and attending professional interactions.”

The Delta Theta Chapter qualified for the award based on their participation in Beta Alpha Psi National and Regional Conferences, receiving the distinction of “Superior Chapter” standing in 2009 and 2010, and the submission of a 10 minute video documenting “Chapter Enhancements.”

Beta Alpha Psi is an honorary organization for Financial Information students and professionals with a mission of promoting the study and practice of accounting, finance and information systems; providing opportunities for self-development, service and association among members; and encouraging ethical, social, and public responsibility. Currently there are 280 chapters nationwide.

MB Therapeutics team members Tarik and Omar Sultan (second and third from right) teach Thai competitors how to “shaka.”

UH students Tiffany Chiang, Omar Sultan, Tarik Sultan, Tim Unten and Chad Walton competed against top schools from around the world in the Global Moot Corp. The team was the first from Hawai‘i to be invited to participate in the prestigious competition. They received two awards for outstanding product and market for their plan for MB Therapeutics, a company that specializes in a noninvasive, targeting drug delivery system. The competition was held in Houston, Texas in May.

Earlier this year, the team placed first runner-up in the Asia Moot Corp competition in Thailand and then qualified for the finals in the San Diego State Venture Challenge. Shidler’s Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship sponsored the team’s entry into all three competitions.

“Our engagement in three business plan competitions this year contributed to some of the most thrilling and educational experiences we have ever had. Being the first team from the State of Hawai‘i to compete in Global Moot Corp was truly amazing. Meeting other teams, participating internationally and learning strategies—what a memorable experience!” shared MB Therapeutics team members.

When Tahitian tattoo artist Tinomana Vachot offered to give Jill Gerner a tattoo, she asked if he would mind drawing her a picture instead. Vachot obliged and produced a piece that would inspire the pair to launch Polynesian Soul, a company specializing in Polynesian tattoo art. “The entrepreneur in me knew I had a valuable and unique piece of art,” said Gerner who instinctively knew there was a market for Vachot's distinct artistic style.

This spring, in hopes of expanding the company's product line to include textiles and other apparel, Gerner diligently worked on a business plan and successfully applied for a Hoku Scientific Microloan. Today, with her microloan, she’s moving the company forward to allow more people to enjoy Vachot’s art on media other than their bodies.

The Microloan program helps UH students start a business or develop a proof-of-concept through loans of up to $5,000. The program is sponsored by the College of Engineering, with administrative support provided by Shidler’s Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship.

On June 27, forty-five members of the Family Business Center of Hawai‘i (FBCH) had a great time networking with one another at the Center’s Annual Social event held at Kualoa Ranch. The day began with a commemorative video entitled “Kualoa: Land of Legacy,” which reflected the history of the Ranch since it was first acquired in 1980. A ranch-style lunch was the next big highlight of the day. The feast included succulent ribs prepared from Kualoa-raised cattle, chicken, chili, and other delectable side dishes. The group spent the rest of the afternoon soaking up the breathtaking scenery of the Kualoa Ranch grounds during a tour of the beautiful gardens and the various locations where movies such as Jurassic Park and Pearl Harbor were filmed. The event concluded with a boat ride around the old Hawaiian fishpond.

Mahalo to Kualoa Ranch President and FBCH member John Morgan for helping to organize such a wonderful gathering for the families of the FBCH.

The Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) has been awarded a $394,000 renewal grant. Anticipated funding for the center through 2014 will total $1.576 million. With the funds, the Center plans to develop new programs partnering with organizations like the UH Islamic Asia Initiative, UH Sustainability Action Alliance, and Hawai‘i Technology Entrepreneurship Network. In addition, it will continue to build upon foundational programs such as the Pacific Asian Management Institute Summer Program, Asian Field Study, and Pacific Asian Consortium for International Business Education and Research.

In recent years, the Center has established several new Asia-Pacific-related programs including the Microfinance Field Study to South Asia, Faculty Development Field Study to Southeast Asia, Online Modules in East Asian Business Languages, and Interdisciplinary International Research.

UH CIBER was a part of the original CIBER centers to be awarded national grants by the U.S. Department of Education in 1989 and is one of the few CIBERS to receive continuous funding throughout the past 21 years, perpetuating its goal of promoting U.S. competitiveness through collaboration, communication, and trade in the Asia Pacific Region.

Vietnam Executive MBA students from Hanoi School of Business and International University in Ho Chi Minh City spent the summer in Hawai‘i expanding their U.S. business perspective. The first group of students to arrive in May immersed themselves in business courses at Shidler. Seven more of their fellow classmates arrived soon after for Summer Session II. All of the students enjoyed their time in Hawai‘i and returned to Vietnam with a deeper understanding of U.S. business culture and practices.
Lecture explores the future of e-vehicles in Hawai‘i

As the keynote speaker for the 2010 Dr. N.H. Paul Chung Memorial Lecture, Chief Marketing Officer Tim Yi presented a fascinating look into CT&T United’s remarkable success as Korea’s top electric vehicle manufacturer. With plans to build an assembly facility on O‘ahu, Yi shared CT&T’s vision for Hawai‘i. “This is one of the cleanest natural environments in the world,” commented Yi. “By manufacturing our vehicles here, we hope to sustain Hawai‘i’s natural beauty. Because this is such a popular international destination, building our cars here will put CT&T and its commitment to green technology on a global stage.”

Since launching in 2002, CT&T quickly climbed to the top of the electric car industry capturing over 70 percent of Korea’s electric cart market. Today CT&T is recognized as a leader in the industry.

Nearly 90 guests attended the 33rd annual lecture held on July 29 at the Hawaii Prince Hotel.

Summer at Shidler focuses on Asia-Pacific Business

The Pacific Asian Management Institute (PAMI) holds a variety of Asia-Pacific business programs and lectures open to students and the general public. The following are highlights from the Institute’s summer initiatives.

In June, PAMI hosted the 2010 PACIBER Annual Meeting in Waikoloa, Hawai‘i. Professors and deans from 20 top business schools in the Asia-Pacific region gathered for the four-day conference. Highlights included a keynote address by the president of Transteel PTE (Singapore) and a site visit to the Natural Energy Laboratory of Hawaii Authority.

The Pacific Asian Lecture Series opened with Carl Nordman of IBM Institute for Business Value who shared his research on CFOs worldwide and success factors of leading firms. He was joined by Kent Lucien, Bank of Hawaii CFO, who presented a local perspective on Nordman’s research. PALS 2010 included seven lectures on international business topics ranging from “Technology in North Korea” to “Leadership Skills for World Class Executives.”

In May, eight MBA students participated in the 2nd annual Microfinance Field Study to India and Bangladesh. Students visited various fair trade groups, went on site visits and participated in roundtable discussions in Delhi and Dhaka. Students also visited the Nobel Prize-winning Grameen Bank to gain a holistic view of microfinance and banking for the poor.

The 27th Asian Field Study presented 20 students with a first-hand look at business practices in Seoul, Beijing, Kuala Lumpur, and Ho Chi Minh City. During the 16-day trip, students visited over a dozen organizations including Hyundai’s R&D facility, Dentsu Advertising, and the Sime Darby Palm Oil Processing Mill. Some of the cultural activities included a hike along the Great Wall, a catwalk on the Petronas Twin Tower Skybridge, and a boat ride along the Mekong River.

The UH CIBER sponsored the inaugural CIBER Global Business Project which enables students from different universities to form virtual teams and apply their business analytics and foreign language skills in real-world situations. A Shidler graduate student participated in the project which involved attending a kickoff meeting in Washington D.C., a consulting trip to Brazil, China or Japan and a final report.

Also this summer, UH CIBER awarded scholarships to four MBA and Executive MBA students who participated in international internships at the Development Bank of American Samoa, Tokio Marine in Japan, GroupM in Vietnam, and the U.S. Center for Disease Control in China.

Cheryl Ka‘uhane Lupenui (BBA ’87)
President and CEO, YWCA of O‘ahu
Birthplace: Washington, D.C. / Hometown: Kaneohe, Hawai‘i

BEST THING ABOUT THE JOB I love working in a place where success is measured by the total wellbeing of the whole community. I also love working with people who really care about others. I am inspired by their sense of responsibility, generosity, and perseverance toward a brighter future, no matter how difficult the challenge.

PRIMARY ROLE Helping my staff to stay focused. We have a very committed and passionate team with a can-do attitude. Sometimes helping to narrow down the “to-do” list is where I can serve best.

GREATEST STRENGTH I strive to bring strengths from both a western and native Hawaiian perspective to my work. Some situations call for actions that stem from a western context that values timely and independent action. Other situations benefit from an indigenous view that sees the world as interconnected—each generation is related to the next.

MENTOR/ROLE MODEL My husband, Boots Lupenui. Not only is he a gifted musician, artist and illustrator but he is also an amazing storyteller. He sees, hears and feels the world in a way that keeps me grounded and helps me to appreciate the magical moments that happen around us each day.

BEST ADVICE Prior to the YWCA, I was solely focused on for-profit business. Working in the non-profit sector was never my plan and so I am even more thankful and honored to have been invited to join this organization. Now, I recommend to students of any age to volunteer and be active in community service. I believe volunteering increases understanding of the issues facing our communities, access to social and business networks, and the ability to lead without a title or authority.

GREATEST STRENGTH I’m willing to challenge the status quo if I think it will improve the organization.

ON THE NIGHT STAND The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo series by Steig Larson

SHIDLER MEMORY In Business 696, we studied a small, fast food-type restaurant in Ala Moana Center, which at the time, was located outside the soon-to-be-built food court. We recommended to the owners that they reformat the restaurant and take a space in the food court, but they decided against it. I am sure there were many factors involved in their decision, but the restaurant is no longer in business.

LITTLE KNOWN FACT I can’t live without mac salad. My favorite is Rainbow Drive-In barbecue steak with mac salad plate lunch.

VALUE OF A SHIDLER MBA My MBA was with a concentration in management, which has been very helpful in my current position. Many of my classes had an emphasis on working in groups, which has also proved useful in my career. And more importantly, I met some great people, some of whom I remain close to and meet with regularly to this day.

Fostering the entrepreneurial spirit in Hawai‘i

With a passion for helping others to realize their entrepreneurial dreams, business executive Sharon Weiner made a $150,000 gift to Shidler’s Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship (PACE). Weiner’s initial gift of $50,000 will support PACE programs and an additional $100,000 will be used to establish the Sharon Weiner StartSmart Entrepreneurship Endowment to develop entrepreneurial programs for students and faculty. Weiner has included a substantial gift to the Shidler College of Business from her estate so the program will be perpetuated.

“Helping those in the University community start their own enterprises reflects my personal interests: encouraging the development of entrepreneurs, and at the same time, supporting the University that gave me my own start in my career in Hawai‘i,” commented Weiner. “I cannot imagine that I could have started a successful consultancy in Hawai‘i without my UH MBA and the personal contacts it gave me over the years.”

Weiner came to Hawai‘i in 1973 and enrolled in the Shidler MBA program. She graduated in 1975. She worked in public relations and advertising before starting her own public relations consultancy in 1979, growing it to become one of the State’s largest. In 2000, she sold the firm and joined DFS Group, where she oversees international global communications worldwide and government relations in Hawai‘i.

Ulrike is a successful entrepreneur and a proud Executive MBA alumna who has played an active role in Shidler’s alumni outreach for many years. Toufiq is president of GEE-21 and is an Adjunct East-West Center Senior Fellow and an Adjunct Graduate Faculty in the University’s Geography Department.

IN MEMORIAM: C. DUDLEY PRATT, JR.

Dudley Pratt, Jr. (MBA ’71), former president and CEO of Hawaiian Electric Industries (HEI), passed away on May 26 after a three-year battle with cancer. Pratt was considered a visionary who helped shape HEI throughout his 37-year career with the company. He retired in 1989 to become a trustee of the Estate of James Campbell where he served until 1997.

This past May, Pratt established a $35,000 scholarship endowed for students of the Evening MBA program at the Shidler College. As a proud 1971 graduate of the program, he credited his business degree with helping him to advance his career.

“Saw a need to enroll in the MBA program,” said Pratt. “As I was moving up in management, I realized that my bachelor’s and master’s degrees in civil engineering from Yale University did not fully prepare me for the financial expertise required at higher management levels. The graduate program prepared me to lead HECO and later HEI.” While he was a student, he worked full-time at HECO while earning a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

“The Leonord and Rebecca Kamp Executive MBA Endowed Scholarship is a memorial gift to memory of my father-in-law, Bill Leonord. I am excited that the scholarship will help to further the education of MBA students at the Shidler College,” said Mrs. Rebecca Kamp.

“In memory of the late C. Dudley Pratt, Jr., and Bernard H. Sun, we established the Terrill A. and Christine B. Sun Memorial Endowed Scholarship in the Evening MBA program at the Shidler College of Business. Chris Sun was a keen supporter of the College, which benefited from his generosity,” said Andrew H. Sun, a member of the Shidler College Board of Visitors.
