DEAN’S MESSAGE

ALOHA,

Walking through the halls of the Shidler College of Business, one cannot help but get caught up in the positive energy that emanates from our students. Their optimism, focus and sense of purpose are absolutely contagious. Each day, I am continually reenergized and inspired by these amazing individuals.

This issue of Shidler Business showcases our extraordinary student body and their finest achievements of the semester. From business competition finalists to top scholarship recipients, these future business leaders represent the best of Shidler and serve as a source of pride for us all.

We will meet several of these stellar Shidler students in our feature story that explores the growing popularity of the College’s business clubs. These remarkable student-run organizations have become an essential resource for those in search of professional development, networking, leadership and life skills that transcend the classroom.

The following pages also celebrate our vital and diverse family of alumni, faculty, staff and supporters who lie at the heart of our growth and success. Read about Professor Dana Alden’s marketing research project involving an interactive tool that strives to improve patient health care in Hawai‘i; the new Distance Executive MBA program that will utilize state-of-the-art technology to reach those on the neighbor islands and in the military; and meet inspirational alumni from around the world including the three successful Hilo businessmen who drew approximately 600 people to our recent Kīpapa i ke Ala Lecture.

It has truly been an incredible semester and we would like to acknowledge the involvement and generosity of our wonderful global community. Our genuine thanks to all of you for helping us to build upon our tradition of preparing tomorrow’s business leaders.

Please enjoy this issue of Shidler Business and thank you for taking an interest in all that we have accomplished together. Mahalo for your support and feedback.

Sincerely,

Vance Roley

Integrity, compassion, responsibility and community were among the key themes of this year’s Kīpapa panel discussion which featured Hilo-born entrepreneurs Allan Ikawa, founder of Big Island Candies, Duane Kurisu, founder of aio, and Barry Taniguchi, president of KTA Super Stores.

The three successful businessmen and long-time friends sat down with PACE Executive Director Susan Yamada last November for a fun and inspirational “talk story” session. The panel drew an audience of over 600 community members which included many of the “Who’s Who” of Hawai‘i’s business world. Some attendees even flew in from Hilo to attend the special event.

The panelists started things off by sharing a few entertaining stories from their early days in business and some of the important lessons learned throughout their careers. Much to the delight of the audience, the humble trio kept the conversation light-hearted by poking fun at each other and dishing out high-fives while Yamada humorously served as the Pigeon English translator for the conversation.

“I feel like I’m sitting in a psychiatrist’s chair,” kidded Kurisu when asked about his early days growing up in Hilo. “I really think public school prepared us to deal with our employees because you have to deal with a whole cross-section of people. You learn how to survive,” commented Ikawa. “So you either have to run away, beat ’em up, or talk your way out of it,” he joked.

The three men, who are all proud graduates of Hilo High and the Shidler College, put the jokes aside once the discussion turned toward their beliefs and philosophies on life and business. All three are deeply committed to perpetuating the local values upon which they were raised—values like compassion, humility, cultural respect, and a sense of responsibility to give back to the community.

“It goes back to a base philosophy that my grandparents had,” explained Taniguchi whose family-owned chain of markets has been... a staple in the Big Island community for 95 years. “We need to take care of the community because it’s the community that is going to take care of us.”

aio’s tag line, “Make your life make a difference,” summed it up nicely for Kurisu. “Things like love, joy, serenity, and happiness are the crux of what aio is all about. That is really the foundation for what we call “local style,”” he said. “Going back to the basics . . . That can really transform the world.” Kurisu’s business ventures stretch the globe and are dedicated to promoting the unique values and cultures of Hawai’i and its people.

Ikawa expressed a feeling of responsibility to take care of his employees. “I really feel that the person you hire should be someone you would love to have as your neighbor because you spend more time at work together than you do at home with your families. So there is a lot of obligation I feel toward my employees.”

When asked about his philosophies on leadership, Taniguchi commented, “Local-style leadership is about having empathy for your employees. Communicate with them. Give them the ability to grow,” he shared. “Put yourself in the other person’s shoes.”

For nearly two hours, the panelists spoke from the heart, inspiring the audience with their simple message of aloha. Each of the men also offered some valuable parting words of advice for entrepreneurs and business professionals of all ages and backgrounds.

“You’ve got to have a good product. You’ve got to offer good service,” said Taniguchi. “Other than that, just put your nose down and go.” He also stated, “Try anything. If it doesn’t work, then you try something else, but don’t stop trying.”

For students, Ikawa emphasized the importance of gaining experience and learning from those around you. “Get as many part time jobs as you can. Do a lot of different things. Then, just sit back and listen to the older guys. Learn from their experiences because it’s going to really, really, pay off down the road.”

“Entrepreneurship is not easy,” said Kurisu. You have to have ‘stick-to-it-ness’ because it’s going to be a lot of hard work.” He also commented, “It’s just [about] living your life without regrets. Just go. Don’t have regrets.”

In true local style, each member of the audience left with an “omiyage” (a gift) filled with treats from aio, Big Island Candies and KTA Super Stores. But, more importantly, everyone took with them a greater sense of belonging, awareness, and appreciation for the islands that we call home. Lucky we live Hawai’i.

The 22nd Kipapa i ke Ala lecture was a free public event held on November 30 at the Ala Moana Hotel, Hibiscus Ballroom. The event was generously sponsored by the Emmett R. Quady Foundation and Kamakura Corporation.

About the Kipapa i ke Ala Lecture Series

The Kipapa i ke Ala Lecture Series is organized by the Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship at the Shidler College of Business. Kipapa i ke Ala means “to pave the way,” which is befitting of this series created to help us understand how Hawai’i can benefit from the fast-paced changes in the worldwide marketplace. This forum brings the best and brightest from the world of business to share their knowledge with students, faculty, alumni and members of the greater Hawai’i community. Call it a boot camp for business students—the Shidler clubs are not your typical student organizations. From as early as their freshman year, students begin signing up for one of 11 undergraduate business clubs at the Shidler College of Business.

Once a member, students are offered professional development training in business etiquette, resume writing, dressing for success, interview techniques, networking and much, much more. Whether students want to hone their business skills, take on a philanthropic project, or snag an ultimate dream job, there’s something for everyone.

At Shidler, clubs are everywhere. Just walk through the first floor corridor and you will see walls with bulletin boards displaying club activities and photos. Approximately 65% of all undergraduate business students are members of one or more clubs. Each club has its own membership requirements and offers a variety of academic and social activities to complement their members’ interests.

“I’ve seen my fellow club members grow academically and personally,” said Business Executive Society of Tomorrow (BEST) President Alyssa Nakao, “They have gained skills within the classroom and from their involvement in club activities. Many members have attained internships and jobs at highly competitive firms such as Boeing and PKF Pacific Hawaii. In addition, many members have seized opportunities to study abroad in countries such as Korea, Japan and Denmark.”

But what Nakao finds truly amazing is the camaraderie. “The friendships that I developed through my participation in BEST are indescribable,” Nakao expressed. “They have not only led to new friendships within our club, but with other club members and business professionals.”

According to Nakao, some of her club’s biggest supporters are business professionals and alumni such as Ross Shimokawa and Lincoln Koike from Ameriprise Financial; Patrick Oki and Heather Yanazaki from PKF Pacific Hawaii; Tracyn Miyashiro-Wong from the City & County of Honolulu; and Kara Iwasaki from Kumabe HR. These professionals offer guidance, financial support, and opportunities to gain experience outside the classroom.

“As a professional, I’ve continued my involvement with students, especially with the leaders of the Inter-Business Council and the Graduate Business Student Association,” added Lilian Rodolfich (BBA ’87, EMBA ’05), vice president of the Shidler Alumni Association and controller for Aloha Air Cargo. “These continued interactions help me to understand what issues students are facing as they navigate their way through college. I feel it’s important to mentor students and help them become successful.”

“We try to enhance the college experience by encouraging students to join business clubs,” said Vance Roley, dean of the Shidler College of Business. “The clubs provide a variety of learning and real-work opportunities through community service projects, company visitations, academic competitions, leadership training workshops, internships, and networking events with Hawai‘i’s business community. These activities are a vital part of the total college experience here at Shidler.”

As president of the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM) club, Tarina Castillo had the opportunity to attend the Hawaiian Airlines recruitment fair in Honolulu earlier this year.

“There were about 2,400 candidates interviewing for the Hawaiian Airlines flight attendant positions,” said Castillo. “Our members were able to observe the hiring process and give their input and recommendations to Hawaiian Airlines personnel. This kind of learning experience is valuable for our success.”

Some clubs promote professional development by encouraging participation in academic competitions or national conferences.

Huy Nguyen, president of the American Marketing Association (AMA), along with several of his fellow AMA members, traveled to New Orleans in March for the 34th American Marketing Association International Collegiate Conference. “Not only did we leave with two awards for Outstanding Chapter Planning and Outstanding Fundraising Chapter, but I was able to meet many students from different AMA chapters around the world,” said Nguyen. “The trip was truly a memorable one.”

The Shidler clubs are also becoming popular for their social and cultural activities attracting many students who want an opportunity to network with one another.

Undergraduate Club Faculty Advisor Robert Bachini expressed that if he had to name one reason for students to join a club, it would be to form relationships. “Success in the business culture often has been attributed to relationships,” Bachini said. “The relationships developed in student clubs extend well beyond the brick and mortar of the College and into the business community.”

No one understands this better than Inter-Business Council President Mary Villoso whose group organized Super Clubs Day in March. “Over 250 students, representing 11 business clubs, gathered for a friendly day of competition in sports, academics, relay races and cheering to win the coveted Super Clubs Day trophy and points towards the Most Outstanding Club Award,” said Villoso. “It was great to see everyone come together to represent their clubs and enjoy themselves at such a fun-filled event.”

There are great benefits for joining a Shidler club. “Participation in student clubs provides opportunities for professional networking, leadership, scholarship, and service,” added Bachini. “These outcome variables translate well in scholarship selection, competitive internships, and prospective employment. My message to students is to take full advantage of every opportunity to build your business career.”

The Distance Learning Executive MBA combines all three elements—flexibility, convenience and innovation—into an exciting new program for working professionals on the neighbor islands and military personnel. The program is flexible to accommodate the working professional, convenient from home or anywhere you can receive Internet access, and offers innovative teaching and curriculum to expand the way you think and work.

The 48-credit program offers an intensive five-day residential weekend at UH Mānoa, 14 core and elective online courses concluding with a capstone course. The faculty-led program is designed in a cohort structure to be completed in approximately 22-months.

“The program uses the latest technology in videoconferencing software to transmit video and audio through the Internet,” explains Program Director Toni Mingo. “This will provide live interaction among students enabling them to ask questions, offer comments, conduct project presentations, and participate in classroom dialogue—all in real time.”

Classes are held online on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6 – 9 p.m. and alternating Saturdays from 8 a.m. - 12 p.m. Students will gather periodically throughout the program at the Shidler campus to network and collaborate on projects. According to Mingo, roundtrip airfare to attend on-campus sessions in Honolulu are included in the tuition.

The first CIO for the United States delivers keynote at HICSS-45

by Amy Watari

This January, approximately 1,000 of the world’s top academics, researchers and practitioners in computer science and information technology gathered in Maui for the 45th Hawaii International Conference on System Sciences (HICSS-45).

One of the big highlights of the conference was a keynote speech by Vivek Kundra, the first U.S. chief information officer.

In 2009, Kundra was appointed by President Obama to the newly created CIO position overseeing policy and strategic planning of federal information technology investments and spending.

During his presentation, “Digital fuel of the 21st century: Innovation through open data platforms,” Kundra shared his views on data transparency and his experiences in establishing successful open data platforms. “The network effect [of open data] is going to fundamentally change the way our institutions operate,” stated Kundra. He went on to explain how public access to government data will solve some of the country’s toughest challenges, create accountability, and launch multi-billion dollar businesses. “Just think about all the untapped possibilities. Think about how much some of these businesses [that are utilizing open data] are worth,” said Kundra. “The Weather Channel sold for about 7.6 billion dollars to NBC. Guess where all that data is coming from.”

Kundra, who is credited with saving over $3 billion in taxpayer money through his initiatives, stepped down as CIO in 2011 to accept a fellowship at Harvard University. Today, he is executive vice president of emerging markets for Salesforce, a cloud computing company.

HICSS-45 also featured a Distinguished Lecture by Doug Cutting, Cloudera architect and co-founder of Apache Hadoop, who gave an insightful presentation entitled “Apache Hadoop and the Big Data Revolution.” Both Cutting’s and Kundra’s presentations, along with the conference’s Best Paper winners, can be viewed online at www.hicss.hawaii.edu/HICSS_45/45highlights.htm.

Over the past 45 years, HICSS has built a name as the premier forum for the interchange of ideas in the Information Systems (IS) industry. It is one of the longest continuously running scientific conferences in the world and is recognized for bringing together top IS academics and professionals in an interactive environment.

The three-day conference features symposia, workshops, tutorials and paper presentations on cutting-edge topics such as cybercrime in the digital economy and secure cloud computing. Industry giants who have recently given HICSS keynote speeches include Nobel Laureate Arno Penzias and former Chief Scientist at Xerox John Seely Brown. The international nature of HICSS drives the innovation edge of research with about 50 percent of participants attending from 40 countries outside of the United States.

On November 12, the Shidler College of Business and the Vietnam Chamber of Commerce and Industry co-hosted an exclusive U.S.-Vietnam business forum at the Kahala Hotel and Resort.

The special gathering was held in honor of Vietnam President Truong Tan Sang and drew over 200 top business executives and community leaders from Vietnam and Hawai'i including Jay Shidler, founder and managing partner of The Shidler Group, Charles Kelley, chairman of Outrigger Enterprises, and two VEMBA alumni, Pham Long Tran, chairman of Vietnam Posts and Telecommunications and Da Truong Ngo, chairman and CEO of QD-Tek Company.

The half-day forum allowed attendees to meet and network, strengthening relationships between professionals from the two economies. “Today, we have an opportunity to make history by taking a major step toward strengthening relationships between the business communities of our two countries,” commented Shidler College Dean Vance Roley. “Over 10 years ago, we took a bold step to offer the Executive MBA program to business leaders, entrepreneurs and government officials in Hanoi. Many of our Vietnamese alumni are directly involved with the growth of Vietnam and contribute to the job market and to the overall economic health of the country. We are very proud to play a part in building the relationship between our two countries.”

Along with a question-and-answer session with President Sang, the forum featured presentations by the President of the Vietnam Chamber of Commerce and Industry Vu Tien Loc, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Hawai'i Brian Schatz, Speaker of the House Calvin Say and the head of Export Finance for the U.S. Export-Import Bank John McAdams. The program concluded with the formal signing of Memorandums of Understanding between the University of Hawai'i at Mānoa, the Foreign Trade University and Hue University.

Congratulations to the winners of the 2012 Breakthrough Innovation Challenge

First Place ($1,000): Engineering Students Nicholas Fisher and Larry Martin for their shoebox-sized nanosatellite that provides reliable means of effective calibration for the U.S. military’s radar systems.

Second Place ($500): Engineering Students David Hummer and Michael Menendez for their electric utility vehicle.

Third Place ($250): Kaua'i Community College Faculty Member Wade Tanaka for his clipboard with mono-pod leg.

Fourth Place ($100 Imagine Award): Business Student Jessica-Nicole Ulloa for her all-in-one tablet.

The Breakthrough Innovation Challenge is presented annually by the Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship (PACE) and is organized in partnership with the College of Engineering and the William S. Richardson School of Law. The Challenge provides UH students and faculty with an opportunity to bring attention to their innovations and obtain the resources needed to further develop their inventions. This year’s contestants submitted their entries via a two-minute YouTube video. The four finalists pitched their innovations in front of judges on November 17. Winners were awarded cash prizes and each received a $100 Imagine Grant.

This January, the students of the U.S. International MBA program participated in a field study to the U.S. West Coast. The six students from China spent about a week touring California and Washington to gain an insiders’ perspective on U.S. business culture and practices.

In addition to site visits to a few of the country’s most successful organizations, the students also had the opportunity to meet with top executives and Shidler alumni including Earl Fry (BBA ‘80), CFO, CAO and EVP of customer support at Informatica, Swan Boon (BBA ‘82), recruiter at Google and John Matsumoto (BBA ‘90), director of global sales enablement at Amazon. Site visits included JP Morgan, Google and Informatica in California and Costco, Amazon and Boeing in Washington.

The U.S. International MBA is an 18-month program designed for Chinese and International students who want to do business with the U.S. The program is offered in partnership with Sun Yat-Sen University School of Business in China. Students spend one year earning an MBA from Sun Yat-Sen and the second year in Hawai‘i earning a Shidler MBA.

Ensuring a high quality education for the world’s future Human Resource leaders Human Resource executives from many of Hawai‘i’s top organizations were invited to join the advisory council for Shidler’s Master of Human Resource Management (MHRM) program. In March, the council met with program leaders to discuss emerging industry trends and provide guidance toward enhancing the program’s curriculum.

Now preparing for its sixth cohort, the MHRM program continues to attract top local, mainland and international students to the Shidler College of Business. Classes are currently offered on O‘ahu and on Maui, Kaua‘i and the Big Island through distance-learning technology. It is the only Master of HR program in Hawai‘i accredited by AACSB International.

Undergraduate finance team makes final four in New York competition

Competing against 250 of the nation’s top business schools in North and South America, the UH Mānoa Shidler College of Business CFA undergraduate team made the final four at the New York CFA (Chartered Financial Analyst) Equity Research Challenge in April.

The students began their quest to the finals by winning the Hawaii CFA Chapter competition in February making them one of 44 schools invited to compete at the New York Americas Championship. In New York City, the Shidler team competed against Boise State, University of Kansas, Grand Valley State, USC and University of Denver to advance to the semi-finals. In the second round, the Shidler team triumphed over Marquette, Wharton (EMBA team) and the University of Manitoba, moving into the final four with William & Mary, Illinois Tech and University of Waterloo. In an extremely close final competition, Illinois Tech was selected as the winner.

The Shidler team was sponsored by the CFA Hawaii Society and CFA Board Member and UBS financial services advisor Paul Yamashita. UH Faculty Member Ben Bystrom served as the students’ advisor.

New Bloomberg terminals allow students to trade like the pros

During the spring semester, 11 new Bloomberg terminals were introduced into key locations throughout the Shidler College of Business. In just a few short months, the powerful Wall Street tool is transforming the way in which students and faculty analyze market activity, make trading decisions and research trends.

The terminals utilize a software subscription to the Bloomberg Professional Service, a computer system which is the industry standard for financial institutions worldwide. In addition to up-to-the-minute stock market data, the service provides access to a massive stream of live news, analytics, communications, charts, liquidity, functionalities, and execution services all in a single user-friendly interface.

Access to the software is also available in Shidler classrooms allowing faculty to easily incorporate the use of Bloomberg into their curriculum.

“I used to teach about asset prices using a page from the Wall Street Journal,” commented Assistant Finance Professor David Hunter. “Now I show asset prices in real-time, and I can instantly transition to more detailed information as may be necessary. It facilitates the use of actual data both to instruct students and to answer their questions. It’s a great tool.”

“Access to the Bloomberg Professional Services will definitely give our students an edge by familiarizing them with a system that is an essential tool on trading floors worldwide,” said Dean Vance Roley.

“Learning to be proficient with this powerful financial tool will be a big asset in today’s highly competitive financial job market.”

The 11 new terminals are available to all Shidler undergraduate, graduate and PhD students. Professors also have access to a terminal which has been installed in one of the faculty suites.
This year’s Southeast Asia Faculty Development in International Business explored the unique aspects of doing business in Vietnam.

Ho Chi Minh City’s (HCMC) growing SMEs and MNE outsourcing was the focus of the first segment of the tour with visits to nine different organizations which included Saigon High Tech Park and Intel’s $1.3 billion manufacturing plant. The Hanoi portion of the trip emphasized the transition of state-owned enterprises with site visits to four companies including Deloitte Vietnam and the Hanoi Trade Corp., a state-owned enterprise.

Also, the faculty hosted a panel session on global financial markets for Shidler’s Vietnam Executive MBA students and an interdisciplinary session led by Vietnamese scholars.

Other highlights included a few exciting cultural experiences—a boat ride along the Mekong Delta, an overnight sampan touring of Halong Bay, exploring a local wet market and watching a traditional water puppet show.

Twenty-one faculty from 14 U.S. business schools participated in the third annual faculty field study held January 2-14, 2012. The program was co-hosted by the Center for International Business Education and Research at the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa and the University of Wisconsin – Madison.

The UH CIBER supported Hawai‘i Export University, a special project of the U.S. Department of Commerce National Export Initiative. The program garnered national recognition on November 11, 2011. The event included addresses by State of Hawai‘i Lieutenant Governor Brian Schatz, and the U.S. Under Secretary of Commerce Francisco Sanchez, who awarded Export University graduates their national certificates of recognition, including Hawai‘i companies Noni Biotech and Cyanotech.

International business center directors collaborate with the APEC Business Advisory Council

On November 7, 2011, the Centers for International Business Education and Research (CIBER) at the University of Hawai‘i hosted a meeting for the directors from all 33 CIBERs from across the U.S. The directors met with members of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Business Advisory Council (ABAC) and executives from Hawai‘i’s business community to discuss recommendations developed by a team of MBA students from the University of Southern California’s Marshall School of Business.

The recommendations represented the culmination of a year’s research which included special onsite work in APEC countries.

The ABAC gathering was held during the CIBER International Education Meeting on November 8-11, 2011. The CIBER meeting featured a panel discussion with the Hawaii Ethnic Chambers of Commerce; a discussion with Deputy Assistant Secretary for Asia for the U.S. Department of Commerce Craig Allen; and a presentation on IBM’s investment in growing markets.

"Hey, Shidler undergraduates! What high school you went?"

In Hawai‘i, when meeting someone new, one of the first questions often asked is, “What high school you went?” (Translation – “From which high school did you graduate?”) For locals, the answer to this question can provide insight into a person’s background, open doors to further conversation, and lead to the discovery of mutual acquaintances. Here are a few high school facts about current Shidler undergraduate students.

Former UBS China executive is named Shidler’s first international executive-in-residence

Richard Leung has been named Shidler’s first international executive-in-residence. In April, the former managing director of UBS Securities Company Ltd., China, arrived in Hawai‘i to begin his new role at Shidler.

Leung spent much of his time with business students helping them to gain a greater understanding of Asian business culture and guiding them in their future career goals and aspirations. He also served as a judge for the University of Hawai‘i Business Plan Competition.

“Richard has really integrated his experience, resources and expertise into the life of the College and he has made a big impact on the students, faculty and staff,” said Vance Roley, dean of the Shidler College of Business. “He has also helped us to build stronger ties with the Asian business community. His contributions have been invaluable to us all.”

Leung has over 30 years of international banking experience. He has held numerous senior executive positions at Hang Seng Bank, Citibank Hong Kong, HSBC Bank USA and DBS Bank where he served as managing director, country head of China and vice-chairman of The Greater China Strategy Committee. He received a Shidler BBA in 1979 and an MBA from the University of Minnesota. Leung was inducted into the Shidler College of Business’ Alumni Hall of Honor in 2008.
DONOR NEWS

Scholarship recipients and donors meet at annual luncheon

On November 14, more than 250 guests gathered for the annual Scholarship Luncheon event at The Kahala Hotel & Resort to thank donors and recognize the academic achievements of Shidler scholarship recipients.

This year, the Shidler College awarded over $1.1 million in scholarships to 220 business undergraduate and graduate students.

Keynote speaker Howard Todo (BBA ’72), vice president for budget and finance and chief financial officer of the University of Hawai‘i System, shared his story of transitioning from a first generation college graduate of UH to a scholarship donor. Believing that education is the key to a successful career and life, Todo and his wife created the Howard and Vivian Todo Scholarship Fund to support students majoring in accounting. “We need to help each other out in order for everyone to succeed. This is what growing up in Hawai‘i teaches us,” Todo said.

Finance and International Business major Billy Wu and full-time MBA student Aidan Millar also shared touching stories of how their scholarships left a major impression on both their academic and personal lives.

The Freeman Foundation has made a gift of $100,000 to establish the Freeman Scholars Asia Abroad Program. The program will help to encourage students to participate in study abroad programs therefore opening the doors for Shidler students interested in gaining a first-hand Asian business perspective. The gift will support 20 undergraduate students studying abroad at one of Shidler’s 11 partner schools in Asia during the 2012-2013 academic year.

Created in 1994 in memory AIG Co-founder Mansfield Freeman, the Freeman Foundation supports the study and understanding of Asia and its cultures. The Foundation is dedicated to strengthening the bonds between the U.S. and the Far East by supporting organizations that foster greater Asian-American appreciation and understanding.

Accounting Executive James Hassett funds a new scholarship

James A. Hassett (BBA ’73) has established the James A. Hassett/Ernst & Young Endowed Scholarship for Accounting Excellence to provide ongoing support to full-time Shidler students majoring in accounting. Hassett’s initial gift of $60,000 was matched by Ernst & Young LLC to total $120,000.

Hassett has had an accomplished career with Ernst & Young. At age 33, he was named a partner with the firm’s Houston office and went on to hold a number of senior management positions throughout the U.S. and abroad. Most recently, he served as managing partner of Ernst & Young’s Far East Area which encompasses approximately 21,000 employees throughout 16 countries. In 2004, Hassett was inducted into Shidler’s Alumni Hall of Honor.

First Insurance Company of Hawaii has established a $50,000 endowed scholarship benefiting students enrolled at the Shidler College of Business. The new scholarship is one in a series of gifts FICOH has made to the College. In 2007, the company established the First Insurance Company Distinguished Professorship to recruit and retain faculty in the area of risk management. In addition, FICOH has been the title sponsor of Business Night for the past seven years.

“As a local business, we have a personal interest in fostering the development of Hawai’i’s future business talent,” said Allen Uyeda, president and CEO of First Insurance. “With our endowed scholarship, we can support the students whose ideas and innovation will one day move First Insurance and Hawai’i’s larger business community forward.”

Shidler alumna makes unique gift of condotel

Cecilia Ho (BBA ’80) has made a real estate gift of $117,000 to the Shidler College. The Ala Moana condotel will be used for visiting professors, faculty candidates, and visiting executives in residence. The future sale of the property will fund the Cecilia Ho Endowed Scholarship for Excellence to support Shidler undergraduate students.

Ho, who resides in Hong Kong, is the president of the Lee Hysan Foundation. Previously, she worked in global banking holding numerous executive positions at Goldman Sachs (Asia) LLC and Citi Private Bank.

She is an avid supporter of educational and humanitarian initiatives such as World Vision, Ocean Junior Chamber of Commerce, and she established an elementary school in Lijiang, China. Ho was inducted into Shidler’s Hall of Honor in 2010.

RESEARCH

RETIREE
A fond aloha to Shidler Distinguished Professor of Management Richard Brislin upon his recent retirement. Brislin served as a faculty of the East-West Center from 1972-1996. He later joined the Management Department in 1996 and retired from the College last year as emeritus professor. Brislin has spent nearly 40 years studying and researching intercultural behavior and has helped many individuals and organizations deal with different attitudes and values in the workplace. Over the years, Brislin’s books have been widely praised for their practical application in the workplace. His published works include Working with cultural differences, dealing effectively with diversity in the workplace, and The art of getting things done: A practical guide to the use of power.

In March, Dana Alden (center) invited Dr. Dale Collins Vidal (Left), director of the Center for Informed Choice at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center, to give a presentation to leading O‘ahu medical institutions and the UH medical school on the value of introducing a new decision aid healthcare tool to Hawai‘i.

IMPROVING PATIENT/DOCTOR INTERACTION
Dana Alden, William R. Johnson Distinguished Professor of Marketing

The Challenge: To contribute to higher quality health care in Hawai‘i through increased use of culturally sensitive patient decision aids.

The Story: Earlier this year, Professor Dana Alden, who specializes in cross-cultural consumer psychology, received a $60,000 grant from the Keck Foundation to work with researchers and practitioners to develop and test online interactive programs designed to improve decision making between patients and their health care providers.

Alden says patient decision aids will help improve health care in Hawai‘i by familiarizing patients with preference sensitive treatment options; enabling patients to clarify values related to alternative treatments; providing feedback to providers on patient values and preferences; enhancing shared decision making between patients and providers; and increasing patient satisfaction and compliance with prescribed treatment.

“I actually see this as a potential industry for Hawai‘i given our unique multi-cultural environment—which is a perfect living laboratory,” says Alden. “Decision aids that are tailored to Hawai‘i’s Asia-Pacific cultures represent potential exports to Pacific Rim markets like China and South Korea where health care quality is increasingly on the radar of policymakers, providers and the general public.”

In addition to Alden’s research, Keck Foundation funds are supporting an expert speaker’s program. This summer, Alden will travel to Japan to give seminars on his research to interested physicians and other health care providers. He will also invite experts from various medical centers across the nation to discuss the development and implementation of patient decision aid technology in Hawai‘i.

Sake Evolution featured a variety of sake specialties paired with the exquisite culinary creations of Executive Chef Travis Inouye from Ka Restaurant and Lounge. A fun group of approximately 70 alumni and friends attended the second annual friend-raiser presented by the Shidler Alumni Association. The event was held on November 17 at Ka Restaurant and Lounge.

The Professional Services Social was the first alumni gathering of 2012. Word is spreading quickly about this popular professional mixer co-hosted by the Young Lawyers Division of the Hawaii State Bar Association and the Shidler Alumni Association. Approximately 100 guests attended the February 2 pau hana at The Standard featuring networking and Happy Hour drinks and appetizers.

The Tokyo Alumni Networking Reception was a special gathering for alumni. It had been a few years since Dean Roley visited Tokyo and many alumni from the area enjoyed the opportunity to reconnect with their fellow Shidler grads. Also, several Japan-focused MBA students attended the event and had a great time networking with the alums. The reception was held on March 9 at Loco Blue with approximately 40 people in attendance.

The Kaua’i Networking Reception was held at the Lihu’e home of alumnus Jim Mayfield (MBA ’85) on April 5. Jim hosted a local-style get-together for a great group of alums living on the Garden Isle. A fantastic time was had by all who attended. This was the second alumni event that Mayfield hosted at his home.

The Maui Alumni Golf Tournament and Networking Event on April 13 was held at the beautiful Wailea Golf Course. After a fun and challenging round of golf on Wailea’s Emerald Course, alums gathered at the club house to enjoy a networking reception at Gannon’s Restaurant. Mahalo to President of Wailea Golf and Shidler Alumna Anne Takabuki (BBA ’78) for helping to coordinate such a wonderful event.

ALUMNI NEWS

“Talk Story” event features the “CEO of Savings”

Arkadi Kuhlmann, chairman and president of ING Direct USA, was the featured speaker for the Shidler Alumni Association’s second annual “Talk Story” event. Nicknamed the “CEO of Savings,” Kuhlmann is one of the world’s leading experts on the use of corporate culture as branding.

During his presentation, Kuhlmann provided insight into his unconventional approach to business strategy, leadership, marketing and management and how these unique philosophies helped ING grow into the most successful online banking venture in history. He also explained how ING stands for a purpose—“Save your money,” the company’s tagline, guides each and every one of Kuhlmann’s business decisions.

From marketing campaigns, to product lines, to turning away customers that do not fit ING’s business strategy, according to Kuhlmann, it is all about intertwining this mantra in to every aspect of the company.

Following the presentation, Shidler alumni and guests lined up to meet Kuhlmann and purchase an autographed copy of his bestselling book, The Orange Code: How ING Direct succeeded by being a rebel with a cause.

The event served as a membership drive for the Shidler Alumni Association. It was held on February 23, 2012 at the Kahala Hotel & Resort.

Wine tasting raises funds for education

Each spring, alumni and friends look forward to the Shidler Alumni Association’s annual Executive Vineyards wine tasting benefit. This year’s event lived up to its reputation as one of the most popular gatherings of its kind.

The Kahala Hotel & Resort’s Maile Ballroom was filled to capacity as nearly 500 wine enthusiasts navigated their way through a maze of tasting stations and silent auction items. Delicious appetizers created by the Kahala chefs complimented the wonderful array of wines and champagnes available for sampling. Guests enjoyed entertainment by Mānoa DNA and emcee Taizo Braden kept the program flowing smoothly.

Premium ticket holders were treated to a private tasting seminar featuring Zonin Italian Wines led by David Gochros from Young’s Market and Mark Milton from Beverage Marketing & More. It was truly a fantastic evening filled with great wine, new connections and renewed friendships.

Over $31,000 was raised at the March 1 event thanks to the generosity of all the event sponsors. A special thanks to Young’s Market Company and Beverage Marketing & More for donating the wines for the evening.

QUANG HUYNH (VEMBA ‘11)
HEAD OF COMMERCIAL BANKING
HSBC BANK (VIETNAM) LTD.
HO CHI MINH CITY, VIETNAM

PRIMARY ROLE
I oversee several departments for HSBC Vietnam including commercial banking, trade and receivable finance, global payments and cash management. We really strive to provide the best solutions, services and experiences for our customers and to deliver the level of return on capital that meets our shareholders’ expectations.

BEST THING ABOUT THE JOB
I enjoy talking to customers and learning about their businesses so we can provide them with the best possible solutions. I also enjoy talking to my employees and helping them to develop. Seeing them grow and succeed in their careers is very rewarding.

ADVICE TO STUDENTS
Enjoy your time in the program. Study hard and play hard because at the end of the day it is not just what you know, but also who you know that is important.

MOST ADMIRED BUSINESS PROFESSIONAL
Sanford “Sandy” Weill, former chairman and CEO of Citigroup and Jack Welch, former chairman and CEO of General Electric

FAVORITE BOOK
The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People by Stephen R. Covey

GREATEST CHALLENGE
It must be participating in the Vietnam Executive MBA program while also working at HSBC during one of the most difficult periods in Vietnam’s modern economic history. I really had to be disciplined and focused so I could succeed on both fronts. Time was really sacred.

VALUE OF A SHIDLER DEGREE
The knowledge and experiences I gained has helped me tremendously in my current job and will continue to help me in my future career. I learned to think about and speak meaningfully on issues relating to strategy, marketing, finance, human resources, technology, etc. What I learned has really built my confidence on these subjects.

NGO TRONG THanh (VEMBA ’10)
FOUNDER, VEMAC

Ngo Trong Thanh has taken Vietnam by storm with his unique twist on the fast food burger. Thanh’s VietMac restaurant chain features burgers made of two rice patties wrapped around a variety of meat and salad. The burgers are accompanied by a small bowl of soup, or canh. According to Thanh, his rice burgers are 100 percent additive free and are a healthy alternative to its traditional counterparts. As quoted in a recent article by DPA Germany, Thanh explained, “The burger is the symbol of fast food in the world. But I am giving them something that tastes like home. Vietnam is a country of rice cultivation. It was built on rice.”

The first VietMac restaurant opened about a year ago and today there are 12 locations throughout Vietnam. The company will go global soon with franchises opening in Germany this summer. www.VietMac.com.vn

STEPHANIE CASTILLO (EMBA ’00)

INDEPENDENT FILMMAKER

KAPA‘A, KAUA‘I

PRIMARY ROLE In 1989, I started Olena Media to make my first film, Simple Courage, which won an Emmy five years later. It was a joint production with PBS Hawaii and I was acting as an independent contractor.

BEST THING ABOUT THE JOB Doing what I love: making stories into documentary films.

GREATEST CHALLENGE Raising money for films. It’s always a conundrum how to do it. Part faith, part business.

VALUE OF A SHIDLER DEGREE As an artist, I learned to ask, what is the company’s self-interest in providing support or funding? Before the EMBA, I (and most artists) only thought to ask, don’t you like my project and want to fund it? Wrong question, I found.

HOBBIES Movies, I love movies, I am still learning how to tell a good story. Eating out with friends - the best! Conversation and trying new restaurants or foods go together so well. Travel for work - I’ve been to Asia and Europe several times to work on film projects and it’s the best way to travel because it opens doors to meet extraordinary people.

ADVICE TO STUDENTS Everything you do will count one day in your work, so build your experiences, don’t be afraid to take a job to learn from that may not be your dream job yet. And still follow your dream!
