DEAN’S MESSAGE

Aloha,

As the fall semester draws to a close and we look forward to the start of a new year, it is a nice time to reflect on all that we have accomplished at the Shidler College of Business and the bright future that lies ahead. This issue of Shidler Business celebrates the many fun times, memorable events and academic successes that we have experienced in recent months and recognizes the incredible individuals who have played a role in those achievements.

We indeed have so much to be proud of at Shidler. Our new programs such as the Freshman Direct Admit Program and Distance Learning Executive MBA are off to very impressive starts and show great potential. More established programs like the Executive MBA, Master of Human Resource Management and Vietnam Executive MBA continue to experience unprecedented success. Our students, alumni, faculty, staff and supporters are all achieving great things both in and out of the classroom bringing world-wide recognition to the College. These are among the many stories that we spotlight in the following pages.

Also, in this issue, we feature Shidler’s Executive Education Center and its distance learning programs. For more than three decades, the Center has been equipping top-level business executives with the skills and knowledge necessary to lead their organizations to new heights of success in Hawai‘i and beyond. Recently, the Center has been experiencing tremendous growth thanks in part to successful new programs geared to help executives in the military and on the neighbor islands prepare for today’s constantly-changing and often-turbulent economic environment.

Through the articles and photos that follow, we hope that you feel a sense of pride in all that we have accomplished. Mahalo for your interest. Please enjoy this issue of Shidler Business. Our future is bright thanks to your support, feedback and involvement. We encourage you to stay connected and we hope to see you soon at our next Shidler event.

Sincerely,

Vance Roley

For over three decades, Shidler’s Executive Education Center has continually enhanced its distance learning programs by incorporating the latest technologies and teaching methods into its curriculum. “Our distance programs have really evolved over the years to overcome the barriers of traditional distance education,” shared Vance Roley, Dean of the Shidler College of Business. “We have worked hard to create dynamic executive degree programs that truly enhance our students’ overall learning experience.”

During the College’s early distance learning years, UH satellite classes were offered on each of the main Neighbor Islands and professors flew over from the UH Mānoa campus to teach. As technology evolved, so did the Executive Education Center. An array of software systems were utilized over the years to provide instruction and deliver lectures. Today, Shidler’s distance learning courses incorporate a unique hybrid approach to teaching that uses the Internet, distance learning technology and traditional teaching methods.

Two of Shidler’s current distance learning programs—The Distance Learning Executive MBA and the Masters of Human Resource Management (MHRM)—provide students with an opportunity to come together for Residence Weekend on O’ahu. Over the course of the weekend, students from all of the Hawaiian Islands meet one another and prepare for the semester ahead. Once the semester begins, a majority of the classes are held through distance learning technology; however, to capitalize on the benefits of traditional learning, classes are also periodically scheduled at the UH Mānoa campus bringing students together for group work and networking.

“We wanted to build a community of learners who contribute their knowledge and life experiences to the group,” said Toni Kruse Mingo, director of Executive Degree Programs. “We also wanted to develop opportunities for students to interact face-to-face with faculty and with their peers. The hybrid approach has been a success. Not only are our students engaged learners, they have a lifelong professional network.”

“After searching through leading MBA programs worldwide, I realized that Shidler’s Distance Learning EMBA format was the only one that could meet my top three priorities: a degree that was accredited; a program flexible enough to complement my demanding work schedule and family life; and one that provided the opportunity to sharing their expertise and experiences. The cohort structure offered an ideal venue to create a strong network and life-long friendships. The varied network with high-caliber people within Hawai’i,” said Brad Rockwell who is a business professional at Kauai Island Utility Cooperative.

“The MHRM professors are knowledgeable and committed professional and educational backgrounds of fellow cohort students made for lively and enriching discussions,” said Tracy Terlep, an employee at Hilo Medical Center.

at Gemini Observatory on the Big Island, wondered how relevant the Distance Learning EMBA program would be for him. “I’ve been able to use something from each class directly in my work and personal life. The cohort experience has also been great and will be one of the lasting benefits of this program.”

As for military personnel enrolled in Shidler’s distance learning programs, many say that the biggest benefit is the flexibility and the College’s expertise in international business. “I chose Shidler’s Executive MBA because of its international recognition and focus on international business,” said Executive MBA student Mike Ogden. “As a naval officer, I had many tuition-free opportunities, but I chose UH because I wanted more than just an education. I wanted to earn my master’s degree with a cohort and I needed the flexibility to work around my schedule. This truly was the best opportunity for me and my career.”

“With the rise in the quality of distance learning programs, professionals are finding it easier to add mid-career skills into their busy lifestyle,” said Kruse-Mingo. “It is for that reason that some companies have embraced these executive programs and have graciously provided financial support to their employees.”

Since 2006, Saltchuk Resources, Inc., through its Saltchuk Hawaii companies—Aloha Air Cargo, Foss Maritime, Maui and Hawaii Petroleum, Minit Stop, and Young Brothers—has provided $530,000 in scholarships to Neighbor Island students enrolled in the Distance Learning Executive MBA program. Saltchuk Hawaii companies are committed to developing future business leaders in the communities they serve by helping Neighbor Island residents. With renewed scholarship funding for the 2014-2016 cohort, they continue to be the College’s partner in opening educational doors.

Since 1977, The Executive Education Center has been preparing managers of exceptional promise to lead the next generation of business professional. Each year, the Center prepares more than 200 working professionals with the knowledge and skills required to adapt to the changing business environment. This preparation includes reviewing business fundamentals across all disciplines, learning new business strategies and best practices, and developing entrepreneurial, creativity and leadership skills. “Through our executive training and degree programs, we are giving those living on O’ahu, the Neighbor Islands and in the military, a life-changing opportunity to advance their careers and help their communities thrive,” said Roley. “It is our way of serving the state of Hawai’i.”
The Hall of Honor Award is the highest honor bestowed upon alumni of the Shidler College of Business. Since its establishment in 1992, only 76 individuals have been presented with this distinguished accolade which recognizes professional achievements, contributions to society and support of the college.

This past October, Shidler proudly welcomed four new members into this elite group of business professionals. aio President and COO Susan Eichor, Central Pacific Bank Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer Denis Isono, Mechthild Esser Nemmers Professor of Marketing at the Kellogg School of Management Angela Lee and Hawaiian Host President and CEO Keith Sakamoto were the guests of honor at the 2013 Hall of Honor Awards dinner. Over 500 guests celebrated the festive occasion on October 17 at the Sheraton Waikiki.

Along with an enchanting opening hula performance by Nä Pualei O Likolehua and a delicious dinner, the highlights of the evening were the entertaining and heartfelt videos starring the four inductees and their close friends and colleagues which included recognizable names such as John Dean, Duane Kurisu and Manny Sylvester. Eichor, Isono, Lee and Sakamoto were then presented with their awards on stage by College namesake Jay Shidler.

The evening also featured a wonderful keynote speech by 2004 Hall of Honor inductee Dee Jay Mailer. Mailer, who has served as the CEO of Kamehameha Schools for the past 10 years, spoke about her upcoming retirement and reflected on all that she had learned throughout the years. “Graduation, or retirement, is really our reward for growing up,” she shared. “It is the culmination of our successes and failures. It is the culmination of the lessons learned and lessons missed. Retirement is wisdom finally trumping egos and retirement is looking at the relationships you shaped over time to respect an unconditional support. And, that is a great place to be.”

The 2013 Hall of Honor Awards event was presented in partnership with Hawaii Business magazine. Proceeds raised benefited the Shidler Alumni Association.

This summer, Shidler completed its 30th Asian Field Study (AFS). Twenty Distance Learning Executive MBAs, four Part-Time MBAs, and one Master of Accounting student participated in the 16-day trip which ran from June 14 through July 2, 2013.

In each of the four cities visited, students focused on exploring an economic topic unique to that country—in Seoul, South Korea’s rise as a global player; in Beijing, China’s strategic shift up the value chain; in Hanoi, Vietnam’s rapid rise as a developing economy; and in Bangkok, Thailand’s changing role on attracting foreign direct investment.

Along with site visits to over a dozen organizations including Samsung, NBA China, Vinaconex and TOMY Thailand, the trip also featured activities that allowed students to further emerge themselves in the local culture such as a visit to a traditional Korean village, a trek along the Great Wall and a bamboo raft ride on the River Kwai.

“This was an amazing eye-opening experience in so many ways,” shared AFS participant Lisa Hadway. “Being able to experience four countries in one trip was really valuable for perspective and comparison.”

Anthony Arakaki had an equally rewarding trip. “It provided me with enormous insight into doing business and living in the countries we visited,” he shared. “The traffic in Bangkok, the mopeds in Hanoi, the Chinese queuing process, and the ‘developed-country’ feeling in Seoul are just words until you actually experience them. The window that I now view the world through has been opened wider.”

The six-credit summer program builds awareness of the interconnected components of the world’s economy and the unique cultural and business practices in Asia. Students complete a rigorous pre- and post-trip curriculum led by Professor Jack Suyderhoud. Also this year, the first Michael and Judy Pietsch Endowed Study Abroad Scholarship was awarded to a Distance-Learning Executive MBA student and a few students received Graduate Student Office Scholarships.

Summer lecture series brings noted Asian-Pacific business experts to Shidler

Drawing renowned speakers to the Shidler College of Business each summer, the Pacific Asian Lecture Series (PALS) addresses current business topics which are relevant to the Asian-Pacific region.

Chinese overseas investing and SMEs in Korea’s business system were just a few of the fascinating topics covered in PALS 2013. The series ran from June 12 to August 13 and featured seven lectures by Asian-Pacific business experts Dr. Miemie Winn Byrd, Dr. Bee Leng Chua, David Day, Dr. Christopher McNally, Dr. Karl Moskowitz and Betty Brow.

PALS concluded with a lecture by businesswoman Tomoyo Nonaka, the former chairperson and CEO of Sanyo Electric and Mark McGuffie, managing director of Enterprise Honolulu. The duo discussed how islands around the world are connecting to solve global challenges by building bridges with common intent.

PALS is free and open to the public. It is organized by the Pacific Asian Management Institute. For a full list this year’s topics and speakers, visit pami.shidler.hawaii.edu/pals.
China is currently the world’s largest vehicle market with sales volume exceeding U.S. sales by almost 40%. The 2013 Dr. N.H. Paul Chung Memorial Lecture and Luncheon provided students, faculty and community members with a fascinating look at China’s rapidly growing auto industry from the unique perspective of one of Shanghai Volkswagen’s top executives, Chief Financial Officer Oliver Schmidt.

Shanghai Volkswagen has been known as an automotive pioneer in the modern Chinese market since it had first been established in 1984 as a joint venture between Volkswagen Group and SAIC Motor. Schmidt discussed Volkswagen’s history as one of the first foreign manufacturers to operate successfully within China and strategies involved with navigating through the unique business and political culture of the region. He also provided insight into the secrets behind Volkswagen’s sustained success as China’s largest volume automobile manufacturing company.

The event was held on June 5 at the Hawaii Prince Hotel, Mauna Kea Ballroom with over 100 people in attendance.

The N. H. Paul Chung Memorial Lecture is held annually each summer in honor of Dr. Chung, who founded the Pacific Asian Management Institute (PAMI) in 1977. The lecture features a distinguished individual discussing an important international topic of interest.

Students find inspiration in nature at the 2013 Breakthrough Innovation Challenge

Cloud Catcher team members Francis Newton Park III and Monica Umeda received their first place award from PACE Director Susan Yamada (far right).

The Breakthrough Innovation Challenge celebrates innovative solutions that are inspired by nature (products, designs, services or processes) to solve human problems.

Monica Umeda and Francis Newton Park III placed first and received $1,000 for Cloud Catcher, a Namib beetle inspired energy-saving, water-harvesting wall that employs hydrophilic and hydrophobic relationships to remove water from outside air and pass clean, fresh air to building occupants. The second place prize of $500 went to Quihui Fan, Wenqi Hu and Aaron Ohta for Organ Assembly In Vitro, a human cell and cellular microenvironment inspired organ assembly technology that assembles single living cells to form tissues and organs outside of the body. Jon White took home the third place prize of $250 for Fly-Sailing, a hydrofoiling catamaran inspired by the Jesus lizard which provides more stability and makes it more usable for a broader range of markets including personal, commercial and military applications.

The finalists presented their innovations and its commercial potential to a judging panel and live audience. The winners were announced at a reception immediately following the live pitches on November 7.

The Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship launched the Breakthrough Innovation Challenge in the fall of 2009 in partnership with the UH Mānoa College of Engineering and the William S. Richardson School of Law. The Challenge now integrates the discipline of bio mimicry and welcomed the College of Natural Sciences as a partner in 2012.

First Mānoa Club Challenge asks competitors to find value in a red plastic cup

Mānoa Club Challenge winners (left to right): The Accounting Club was named Social Media Master; The American Marketing Association was named Most Profitable; The Hawaii Student Entrepreneurs was named Most Creative.

The Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship launched its first ever Mānoa Club Challenge this past October.

The competition offered student clubs from UH an opportunity to generate funds by selling a product or service using a mystery object—a red plastic cup.

Teams submitted a two-minute YouTube video that captured their entrepreneurial skills. Entries were reviewed and selected to move on to the final competition based on creativity, collaboration, critical thinking and effective communication.

Top video entries were shown at the final competition on October 21. Each of the finalists also participated in a five-minute question and answer session with a panel of judges.

The Hawaii Student Entrepreneurs were named Most Creative. The American Marketing Association was named Most Profitable. The Accounting Club’s video racked up the most Facebook likes and the club was named the Social Media Masters of the 2013 Challenge. Each of the winning teams walked away with a $1,000 cash prize.

Each year, Shidler’s annual Scholarship Luncheon brings together hundreds of scholarship donors and recipients. For students, the event provides an opportunity to thank the individuals who have helped to fund their education and for donors, it offers a chance to see the impact that their gifts have on a student’s success in school and life.

L&L Hawaiian Franchise President Eddie Flores (BBA ’70) addressed the crowd as the day’s keynote speaker. Flores talked about the challenges he faced in school and the doors that opened thanks to a scholarship he received while studying business at UH. He also shared about his rise to success with L&L and the philosophies that fuel his strong commitment to give back to his alma mater and the community.

“I urge donors to continue to support the business school because it is very important,” said Flores. “And to students, I know that you may be struggling now but as you find success in your careers, please give back. Whatever you give will come back to you tenfold.” In 2007, Flores established a $1 million endowed scholarship at Shidler which has impacted the lives of over 50 students in this academic year alone.

Kaili Taniguchi and Jaime Uota spoke on behalf of the undergraduate and graduate scholarship recipients respectively. Both Taniguchi and Uota talked about the challenges they faced in school and the amazing opportunities that resulted from their scholarships. “Through your generosity, I was able to travel the world and become the person I want to be,” stated Taniguchi. “I was changed for the better because of donors like you and I plan on paying it forward, because you have truly made a difference in my life.” Taniguchi is an entrepreneurship and international business major and she is a recipient of the Oscar and Rosetta Fish Scholarship for Excellence. Uota is a full-time MBA student and a recipient of the Shidler Jumpstart MBA Program Scholarship.

The event was held at the Waialae Country Club on November 4 with over 220 students, donors and guests in attendance. Over $1 million in scholarships have been awarded to 280 of Shidler’s best and brightest students for the 2013-2014 academic year.

For a full list of scholarship donors and recipients, and to view this year’s keynote and student addresses online, visit www.shidler.hawaii.edu/scholarshipluncheon.

A team of four Shidler undergraduate students traveled to Boston to compete in the annual CUlBE (Consortium of Undergraduate International Business Education) Case Competition which was held on November 1 - 2 at Northeastern University’s D’Amore-McKim School of Business.

Sixteen teams from leading schools of international business competed in the first round. Four teams advanced to the finals. Representing the Shidler College were Christopher Saki, Joe Hawkins, Jared Kushi, and Kevin Lee, with advisor Professor James Richardson.

The case concerned Nokia’s declining market share in India and China in 2012 and raised questions about the company’s strategy in the smartphone market as well as the older handset business where Nokia still holds the largest market share.

The Shidler team put on a great presentation, but were narrowly edged out by the home team from Northeastern, who went on to place second overall.
The 2013 Microfinance Field Study provided eight Shidler students with the opportunity to witness, first-hand, the myriad of issues that face microfinance initiatives in today’s global marketplace.

During the 14-day trip, which included stops in Delhi, India and Dhaka, Bangladesh, the students visited both traditional and local village microfinance lending institutions. They also met with loan recipients and local social entrepreneurs to better understand the microfinance lending cultures within the two counties.

Site visits to governmental and non-governmental organizations and with loan recipients in India gave the students a glimpse into how fair trade policies are helping to improve the lives of the country’s poor.

In Bangladesh, students met with representatives from Grameen Bank to experience microfinance from a bottom-up approach and learned from recipients of the loans. Other highlights included visits to USAID (American Embassy), Sanskriti Kendra, Fair Trade Form India and Tara Projects, MESH, a Fair Trade Organization, Sariakandi Milk Collection Center of Grameen Donane Foods and Eye Care Hospital to name just a few.

“The program that Professor Bhawuk put together and the plethora of connections that he has in those countries made it a truly unforgettable experience,” shared Brent Kobayashi. “The highlight of the trip for me was connecting with schoolchildren from an impoverished section of India and having a Q&A session with a Bangladeshi beggar turned entrepreneur. Six months later and I still regularly reflect upon the experiences we made there—but I definitely do not miss the car rides in Bangladesh!”

The 2013 Microfinance Field Study ran from May 11 – 25 and was led by Shidler Professor of Management Dharm Bhawuk. The program was coordinated by the Fair Trade Forum-India, the Self Employed Women’s Association, Grameen Bank of Bangladesh and the Pacific Asian Management Institute at the Shidler College of Business.

Family Business Center activities promote education, networking and collaboration

The Family Business Center of Hawaii (FBCH) held its Annual Retreat on September 27-28 at the Outrigger Reef on the Beach. Themed “Beyond succession planning: Building unity through a family strategy,” the retreat explored the many complex transitions that are a part of the succession process.

Presenters included Andrew Keyt, executive director of the Loyola University Chicago Family Business Center and president of FBN-USA; Greg McCann, founder and director of the Family Enterprise Center Stetson University and founder of McCann & Associates and Fred Sasser, CEO of Sasser Family Holdings.

More than 100 Family Business Center members were in attendance.

Also, the Center held its summer socials in Maui and O’ahu. On June 28, students of the UH Maui Culinary Academy served up delicious street food style appetizers and took members on tours of their highly-acclaimed facilities. The O’ahu social on July 19 featured networking over scrumptious Wahoo’s tacos and drinks at the Hawaii Children’s Discovery Center.

Guest speakers discuss ethics within the food industry as a part of the Will Weinstein summer lecture series

For the past ten years, visiting lecturer Will Weinstein has led a graduate summer course entitled “Ethics and Integrity in the Real World” for the Shidler College of Business and the William S. Richardson School of Law. Running in conjunction with his class, Weinstein also holds a public lecture series which challenges both students and community members alike to take a deeper look at the many ethical issues facing society today.

The featured lecture for this summer’s series addressed many of the ethical issues faced by individuals working within the food and restaurant business. Guest panelists chef and restaurateur Beverly Gannon, President & CEO of Tri-Star Restaurant Group Aaron Placourakis and Top Chef finalist Sheldon Simeon, shared their thoughts on several hot topics within the industry such as the use of GMOs, health and obesity responsibilities, and menu transparency. Members of the audience also chimed in on the discussion during a lively Q&A session. The lecture was moderated by Weinstein and was held on July 18 at Kapiolani Community College’s Ka ‘Ikena Dining Room.

The 2013 Will Weinstein Conversation Series ran between July 16 - August 1 and included six public lectures featuring 16 guest speakers who offered insight on a wide variety of ethical issues within their fields of expertise.

Startup Weekend UH: Great ideas. New friends. Limitless opportunities.

For the second year in a row, the Pacific Asian Center for Entrepreneurship has brought Startup Weekend to the UH campus. The whirlwind three-day event, held November 1-3, brings budding entrepreneurs together to share ideas, experience startup culture and meet like-minded people.

Startup Weekend UH kicked off with a pre-event geared toward helping students understand what to expect over the weekend. Facilitator Joey Aquino provided pointers on pitching and went over the importance of customer interviews and time management.

On Saturday, student teams worked on validating their ideas and building a viable product. The weekend culminated with Sunday night presentations where teams receive valuable feedback from local entrepreneurs.

Best Design was awarded to Team Food Fast. Team Show Aloha won Best Pitch. And Team Hawaii Hoops Network was named Most Likely to Succeed. Each received the opportunity to present to the Hoku Scientific Microloan committee; an invitation to a Hawaii Angels luncheon; PACE Professional-in-Residence mentorship priority and help with identifying a dedicated mentor.

RESEARCH

By Tawei (David) Wang
Assistant Professor of Accounting
Published in the Journal of Organization

Motivated by information security breach incidents making headline news, Wang’s research examines the association between the media reports of information security breach and stock prices, as well as the reaction in trading volume surrounding the breach announcement of the affected firm(s).

His findings suggest that when breach reports provide more detailed information of the incidents, a more consistent belief is formed by the market about the negative impact of the reported security incident on the firm’s business value. However, when there is a lack of specific information regarding the reported breach, the market seems mixed on the impact of reported security incidents.

Therefore, he found that by exploiting the different perceptions among investors, one could form a trading strategy that provides 300% (average) annual profit around the time the security breach is reported in the media.

Bringing Alumni Together

Throughout the summer and fall months, Shidler graduates came together for several fun and memorable gatherings.

Financial Executives International establishes an endowed scholarship for accounting and finance students

The Hawai’i Chapter of Financial Executives International (FEI) has established a $35,000 endowed scholarship to support Shidler undergraduate students who are majoring in accounting and/or finance. “The Hawaii Chapter of Financial Executives International is a proud supporter of education,” commented FEI Treasurer Randall Kawano (BBA ’81). “For many years, we have supported the Shidler College of Business through annual scholarship donations, as well as Business Night awards. The establishment of an endowment fund allows us to support accounting and finance students in perpetuity. I’m happy to say that we’ve had overwhelming support from our membership.”
