Welcome

Tonight we celebrate the start of an exciting chapter in the College’s 57-year history with the inaugural Shidler College of Business Hall of Honor Awards.

Beginning this year, we will honor not only our most accomplished alumni worldwide, but for the first time induct Hawaii’s outstanding business professionals into the College’s Hall of Honor.

I believe this recognition is long overdue. For many years, Hawaii’s business community and our extended business partners abroad have been an important resource in our teaching and research, and developing students’ practical business skills and real-world business experiences.

In my conversations with many of you, I discovered how similar our business goals are: to embrace new ideas, explore new business opportunities, keep pace with the changing global business environment, develop a sense of community service, and to work for the betterment of the entire state of Hawai‘i.

Tonight, we honor three remarkable business leaders who exemplify these goals: Walter A. Dods, Jr., David A. Heenan and Jay H. Shidler. They have shown by example that business excellence at all levels is possible, and embolden our hope for a successful future.

I would also like to recognize Jay Shidler for his $25 million gift to the College. It is an honor to be associated with a man of such vision and integrity, who has accomplished so much in his career, both here in Hawai‘i and nationwide. Mr. Shidler embodies the values we strive to instill in all of our students—entrepreneurial spirit, leadership, discerning business judgment, integrity, and a sense of community.

I’m honored that you have chosen to join us in this historic celebration. With your support, I am confident we can transform the Shidler College of Business into a premier institution that is ranked in the top 25 public business schools nationwide.

Sincerely,

V. Vance Roley

Hawaii Business magazine is delighted to be the title sponsor of the first annual UHM Shidler College of Business Hall of Honor Awards dinner. It is a singular honor and privilege on several levels:

first, we are humbled to share in the opportunity to honor Walter Dods, Jr., David Heenan, and Jay Shidler whose contributions to business in Hawai‘i—and to the Hawai‘i community at large—are venerated and serve as shining examples of what business at its best can be;

second, we are proud to associate ourselves with the University of Hawai‘i and, in particular, the Shidler College of Business which as pillars of higher education in Hawai‘i serve a critical role in training the future leaders of Hawai‘i’s business community;

third, we wholeheartedly support the University of Hawai‘i Foundation and its efforts to raise funds for scholarships to ensure that financial need is not an obstacle to gaining access to higher education; and finally, we are grateful to have had the pleasure of working with Dean Vance Roley and his stellar staff in this effort which has also served to remind us how wonderful great partnerships can be.

With congratulations and warmest aloha,

Hoyt H. Zia, Publisher, Hawaii Business
Walter A. Dods, Jr.

Walter A. Dods, Jr., an alumnus of the College, is chairman of First Hawaiian Bank and BancWest Corporation, whose main subsidiaries are First Hawaiian Bank and Bank of the West; vice chairman of the Board for Bank of the West and trustee of the Estate of Samuel Mills Damon.

A leader of the banking industry in Hawai‘i, Dods joined First Hawaiian Bank in 1968. He worked his way up through management and was named president in 1984 at age 43, becoming the youngest bank president in the nation of its size. In 1989, he was appointed chairman and CEO of First Hawaiian Bank.

During his 15-year tenure as head of First Hawaiian Bank, Dods negotiated a series of mergers that eventually led to the biggest corporate acquisition in Hawai‘i history. The merger with Bank of the West increased assets to well over $38 billion and added more than 350 branches, transforming First Hawaiian Bank into the largest financial institution in the Hawaiian Islands.

In 1996-97, Dods served as president of the American Bankers Association, the only banker from Hawai‘i to hold that position. He was also appointed as one of 12 leading U.S. bankers to serve as a member of the Federal Reserve Board’s Federal Advisory Council.

Over the years, Dods has served on many boards. In retirement, he remains active on several nonprofit boards in Hawai‘i.
David A. Heenan is a trustee of the Estate of James Campbell, one of the nation’s largest landowners with assets valued at over $2 billion. Formerly, he served as chairman and CEO of Theo H. Davies & Co., Ltd., the North American holding company for the Hong Kong-based Jardine Matheson. Earlier, he was the vice president for academic affairs at the University of Hawai‘i. A former Dean of the UH Mānoa College of Business from 1975-1980, Heenan is credited with internationalizing the business curriculum. He currently serves as a member of the College’s Advisory Council and a frequent guest speaker in the classroom and at many alumni events.

Heenan holds an AB degree from the College of William and Mary, an MBA from Columbia University and a PhD from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He has served on the faculties of the Wharton School and the Columbia Graduate School of Business. He also serves on the boards of Bank of Hawaii, Maui Land & Pineapple Company and several other organizations.

Jay H. Shidler

Jay H. Shidler is the founder and managing partner of The Shidler Group, a Honolulu-based commercial real-estate investment company.

Shidler, the son of an Army officer, lived in many of the world’s most famous U.S. military communities before arriving in Hawai‘i. He attended the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa and graduated in 1968 with a bachelor’s of business administration degree. While attending UH, Shidler worked part-time for several real-estate firms helping to develop the 1111 Wilder condominium. He was commissioned as an officer in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and left the service in 1971 to form The Shidler Group in Honolulu.

He purchased his first building, the Polynesian Plaza on Kalakaua Avenue in 1972 and quickly expanded to the mainland with acquisitions in Santa Barbara and Seattle. Today, The Shidler Group has acquired and manages over 2,000 properties across the country and in Canada, including significant holdings in Honolulu, New York, Southern California and Arizona. In Hawai‘i, The Shidler Group has over 1.5 million square feet of premium office spaces in its portfolio—approximately 10 percent of the entire state. Its holdings include the Davies Pacific Center, City Center, Waterfront Plaza, First Insurance Center and the Pan Am Building.

Of the many successful companies Shidler has founded, four are now listed on the New York Stock Exchange: TriNet Corporate Realty Trust, Inc. (now called iStar Financial, Inc.), First Industrial Realty Trust, Inc., Corporate Office Properties Trust, and Primus Guaranty, Ltd. In 2006, Shidler formed Pacific Office Properties Trust, which he plans to take public in 2007.

He is an active supporter of many educational, cultural and charitable organizations, including The Shidler Family Foundation.

In the past, prominent business alumni were inducted into the College of Business Alumni Hall of Honor during Business Night, an event that has gained significant recognition over the years for providing mentoring opportunities and student awards. This year, the College will showcase the Hall of Honor awards in an evening of its own, and expand the induction of the honorees to include outstanding non-alumni business professionals who have contributed to the College and to our community. Welcome to the inaugural UH Mānoa Shidler College of Business Hall of Honor Awards.
