Textbook: There is no textbook for this course, as the course focuses on case studies.

Prerequisites: ACC 625 and last semester of the Master of Accounting program. All other students will be dropped from this course.

Change in status: Follow the UH process and deadlines for dropping a class. If you did not drop the class, and do not attend the class, you will receive a grade of “F” for the course.

Course description: ACC 660 is the capstone class taken in the last semester of the Master of Accounting program. The course is designed around case studies and group presentations on various topics (financial accounting, auditing, business management, risk management, etc.) to allow you to apply what you have learned in your business and accounting courses. The cases are detailed in the class schedule at the end of this syllabus.

Course objective: Upon completion of the course, students should be able to apply business and accounting concepts to various situations and effectively present what has been learned from each case. The objectives can only be met if the student has a good understanding of accounting and business concepts, completes the assignments and actively participates in the classroom learning experience.

Attendance: In order to achieve the course objectives, students are required to attend (arriving on time) and participate in the classes. Arriving to class more than 15 minutes late without an acceptable reason will be considered non attendance. Lack of attendance will mean that the student will not receive any points for that class presentation. Attendance does not just mean being physically present, but also being attentive during the class (i.e., not disrupting the class or other students, not
