Course Description

The objective of this class is to help you develop your research agenda in early stage of your PhD program. We will have research presentations by faculty members and fellow students. These presentations will provide you exposures to how an original research paper can be motivated, empirically executed, and finally written up. Class discussions may also include the database available in the Shidler College\(^1\) and the programming skills necessary for empirical research. Furthermore, we may also discuss how to build up your teaching portfolios and how to improve teaching performance.

Course Requirements

Besides attending all presentations by faculty and fellow students, each student should also make one presentation on your research ideas. In addition, each student must submit a written report on his or her research proposal by the end of spring semester. Please note that this is a 3 credit hour class for the entire academic year. Students will take this class for 1 credit (Pass or Fail) in the fall semester of 2016 and 2 credits (Pass or Fail) for the spring semester of 2017.

Class Presentations

\(^1\) Database available at the Shidler College:
1) Bloomberg terminal

3) Standard & Poors Compustat
4) CRSP-Mutual Fund
5) Thomson Reuters – Datastream
6) WRDS (for username and password set-up, register at https://wrds-web.wharton.upenn.edu/wrds/)
Each class, we will invite faculty members from each department and senior PhD students to present their recent research and share their research experiences. In spring semester, in addition to faculty presentation, each student will have an opportunity to present their research ideas. By the end of spring semester, each student must turn in a research proposal.
